VIBRANT CITIES

In April 2011, the U.S. Forest Service and non-profit New York Restoration Project (NYRP) convened the Vibrant Cities and Urban Forests: A National Call to Action task force outside Washington, DC. The three-day workshop addressed the future of our nation's urban forests and ecosystems; incorporating the health, environmental, social and economic

Annual SUFC Meeting and Advocacy Day - 2011

SUFC members set attendance and participation records for our Annual Meeting and Advocacy Day on April 12th and 13th in Washington, DC.

Your collective hard work (prior and at the meeting) resulted in clearly identified priorities which the Steering Committee is shaping into a practical action plan for 2011-2012.

Thank you to all SUFC members and guests who participated, presented and shared their expertise and time. Special thanks to meeting sponsors including: Keep America Beautiful, International Society of Arboriculture, American Forests, Tree Care Industry of America, National Association of State Foresters, and Arbor Day Foundation.

benefits they bring to sustainable and vibrant cities. The VCUF task force set out to craft a vision, set of goals and recommendations to advance urban forestry and natural resources stewardship into the next decade and beyond.

The 25 member Task Force include the nation's most visionary and respected municipal and state officials, national and local non-profit leaders, researchers, urban planners, and foundation and industry representatives. This three-day session was intense. Participants shared they were leaving "inspired", "with a much wider circle", "smarter and better informed", and "leaving with a sense of hope."

Three SUFC member representatives: Jim Skiera (International Society of Arboriculture), Mark Garvin (Tree Care Industry Association), and Dan Lambe (Arbor Day Foundation) are serving on this prestigious (and demanding) Task Force. Several other SUFC member organizations are also represented including the Alliance for Community Trees, National Association of State Foresters, and Society of Municipal Arborists. SUFC also has on-going participation on the Planning Committee.

EPA Strives to Create More Livable Cities Through Green Infrastructure

April 29th the EPA announced the release of their new Green Infrastructure Strategic Agenda and community partnership effort. The Strategic Agenda is the outline of activities that EPA will be undertaking to encourage more rapid adoption of green infrastructure practices. Through the partnership effort, EPA will work with communities to address implementation issues and foster information sharing. The first 10 communities in which our partner organizations are located were announced and additional partners will be identified in the coming months.

In addition, the Office of Water and the Office of Enforcement and Compliance Assurance issued a joint memorandum encouraging communities to use green infrastructure approaches for wet weather management.

America In Bloom

Laura Knukle,
Executive Director

America in Bloom's (AIB) mission is to promote nationwide beautification through education and community involvement by encouraging the use of flowers, plants, trees, and other environmental and lifestyle enhancements. AIB supports this mission through a variety of programs and services, including a friendly competition between communities. Cities are evaluated by eight criteria: urban forestry, floral displays, landscaped areas, turf & groundcover areas, environmental awareness, community involvement, tidiness, and heritage preservation.

Trees are purposefully included in the mission statement and as one of the eight criteria that cities are evaluated on because of the value they bring to the world.

Each year I'm amazed to learn about the AIB outstanding tree programs many cities have in place. AIBI celebrates and recognizes these efforts, but also takes the important next step of sharing these best practices with other communities so they can develop their own successful urban tree management programs.

AIB shares a commitment to a consistent urban forest agenda with other SUFC members. It's wonderful that SUFC can bring together like-minded organization to facilitate dialogue and develop solutions. We all become stronger by working together.

All SUFC members endorse a common set of Policy and Operating Principles.
